

Erratum: Emergency Laparoscopic Management of Perforative Peritonitis: A Retrospective Study

---

Article published 12/02/2021
Article corrected 03/10/2022

Rafique Umer Harvitkar <sup>1</sup>, Giri Babu Gattupalli <sup>2</sup>, Sakib Najmu <sup>3</sup>, Abhijit Joshi <sup>4</sup>

1. General Surgery, Dr L.H. Hiranandani Hospital, Mumbai, IND 2. Surgery, Sri Chandra Sekhara Hospital, Hosur, IND 3. Surgery, Queen Alexandra Hospital, Portsmouth, GBR 4. Gastrointestinal and Endo-Laparoscopic Surgery, Dr L.H. Hiranandani Hospital, Mumbai, IND

Corresponding author: Rafique Umer Harvitkar, dr_rafiq639@yahoo.com

Corresponding author: Rafique Umer Harvitkar

1. General Surgery, Dr L.H. Hiranandani Hospital, Mumbai, IND 2. Surgery, Sri Chandra Sekhara Hospital, Hosur, IND 3. Surgery, Queen Alexandra Hospital, Portsmouth, GBR 4. Gastrointestinal and Endo-Laparoscopic Surgery, Dr L.H. Hiranandani Hospital, Mumbai, IND

How to cite this erratum

Harvitkar R, Gattupalli G, Najmu S, et al. (March 10, 2022) Correction: Emergency Laparoscopic Management of Perforative Peritonitis: A Retrospective Study . Cureus 14(3): c58. doi:10.7759/cureus.c58

Correction Notice

The following typos were present in the original published version of this article and have now been corrected:

1. Materials & Methods, first paragraph after Figure 1, first sentence: pulse changed from 10 bpm to 110 bpm
2. Materials & Methods, first paragraph after Figure 1, first sentence: the following clause was removed: "patients unable to withstand pneumoperitoneum remove this point"

Cureus regrets that these errors were not identified prior to publication.