

Editor's desk – Own laws of work

I am presenting to you volume 4 issue 2, National Journal of Maxillofacial Surgery. This all have been possible with the blessings of my senior professors of K. G. Medical University and maxillofacial fraternity. I have had the good fortune of getting younger colleagues whom I could approach freely while preparing the issue.

India had progressed over the years in the field of maxillofacial surgery. Let us take into consideration of all the challenges of the specialty and adopt the process of change management and try to move on to good rank in global scenario. Perhaps, the greatest and most modern idea to achieve this is the focus on commitment to work, without getting excited about the rewards (Geeta - The Holy Book). Therefore we all have to develop our own laws of works, keeping in mind the requirement of maxillofacial students and patients.

Professor U. S. Pal
MDS, FICOI, DICOI (U.S.A.)

Department of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery,
K. G. Medical University, Lucknow, Uttar Pradesh, India.
E-mail: druspalkgmc@gmail.com

Access this article online
Quick Response Code: 	Website: www.njms.in
	DOI: 10.4103/0975-5950.127640

How to cite this article: Pal US. Editor's desk - Own laws of work. Natl J Maxillofac Surg 2013;4:135.