

Avoidance of Blood Transfusion to Patients Suffering From Myocardial Injury and Severe Anemia Is Associated With Increased Long-Term Mortality: Erratum

In the article “Avoidance of Blood Transfusion to Patients Suffering From Myocardial Injury and Severe Anemia Is Associated With Increased Long-Term Mortality”,^[1] which appeared in Volume 94, Issue 38 of Medicine, one of Dr. Robert’s affiliations was not originally included. The article has since been corrected online.

Reference

- [1] Barbarova I, Klempfner R, Rapoport A, et al. Avoidance of blood transfusion to patients suffering from myocardial injury and severe anemia is associated with increased long-term mortality. Medicine. 94;38:e1635.