Top 20 Peer Reviewers for 2020

Peer review is an essential component of ensuring the quality and validity of published scientific research. It is vital in ensuring that published results can be trusted. The editorial team at Advances in Radiation Oncology wish to express our thanks to everyone who has contributed to the journal's growth and success during the past year. The past year has proven remarkable in many ways owing to societal changes caused by the pandemic. Scientific publishing was stressed in ways heretofore unseen. The urgency to quickly publish scientific findings and best practices on coronavirus disease 2019 created great demands on our reviewers. At Advances in Radiation Oncology, manuscript submission roughly doubled in 2020 compared with 2019. Although our time to first decision has been excellent by industry standards (roughly 42 days from submission to first peer review decision), our reviewers were able to review many of our most important COVID-19 manuscripts in a matter of days, ensuring that critical information about the response to the pandemic was in the hands of clinicians and investigators as quickly as possible. The editorial team extends its most grateful thanks to all of our reviewers. We would like to recognize our top 20 reviewers below.
